

Seizures of Nothing Much - 55 Words of Black-Outs

Luca M Damiani

To clarify:

dizziness means nothing.

Fogginess?

Balance issues?

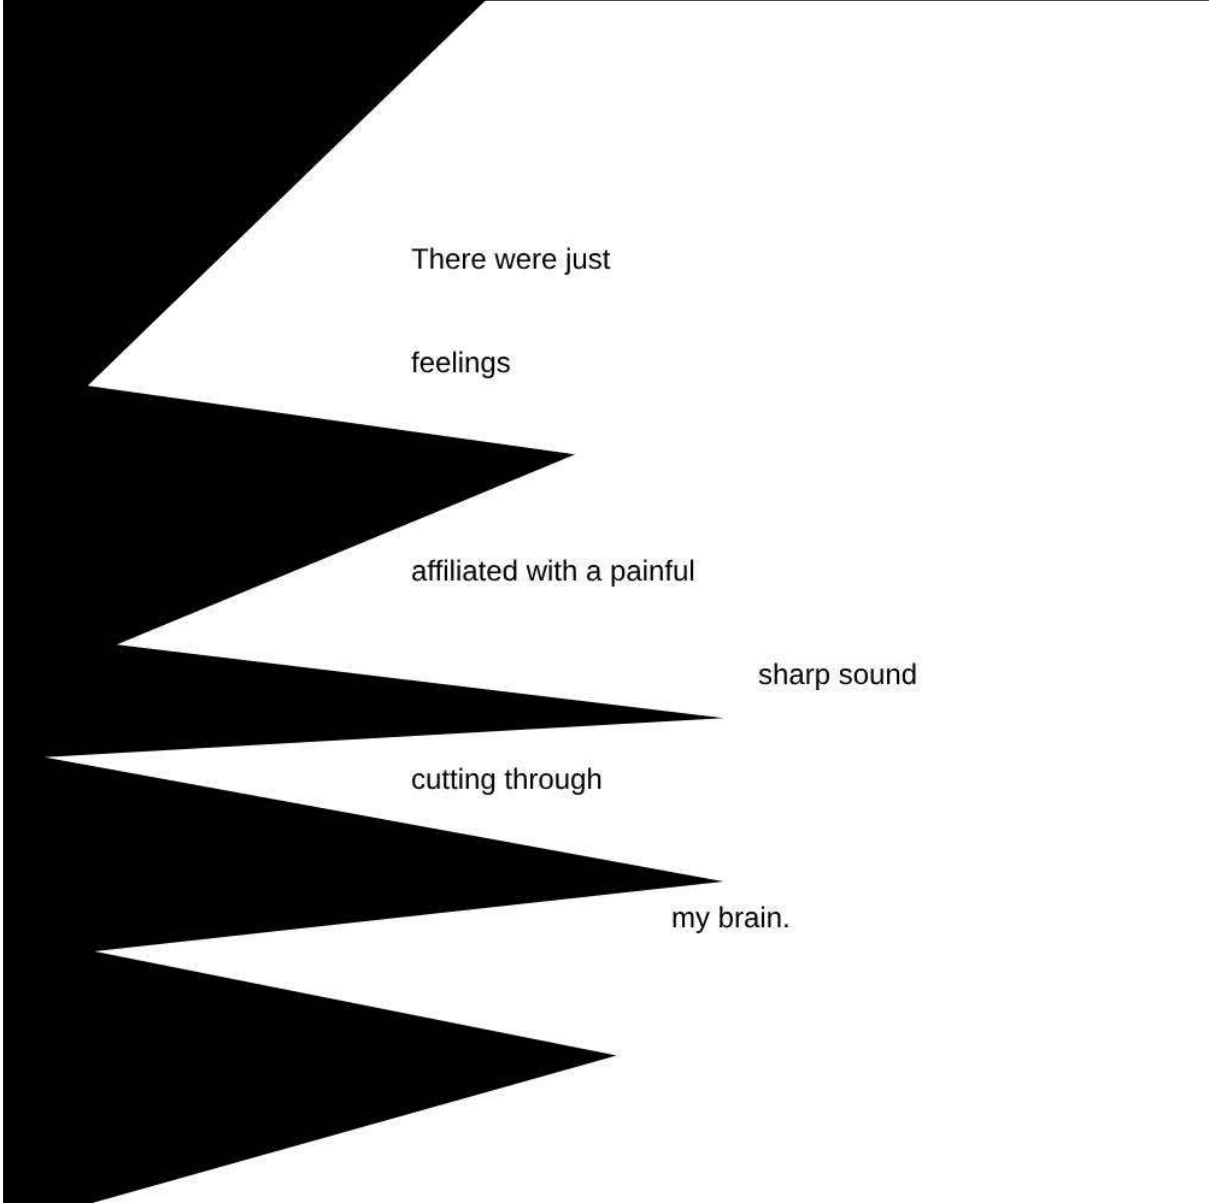

Light head-ache?

At first,

I actually did not know

what was happening to me.

There were just

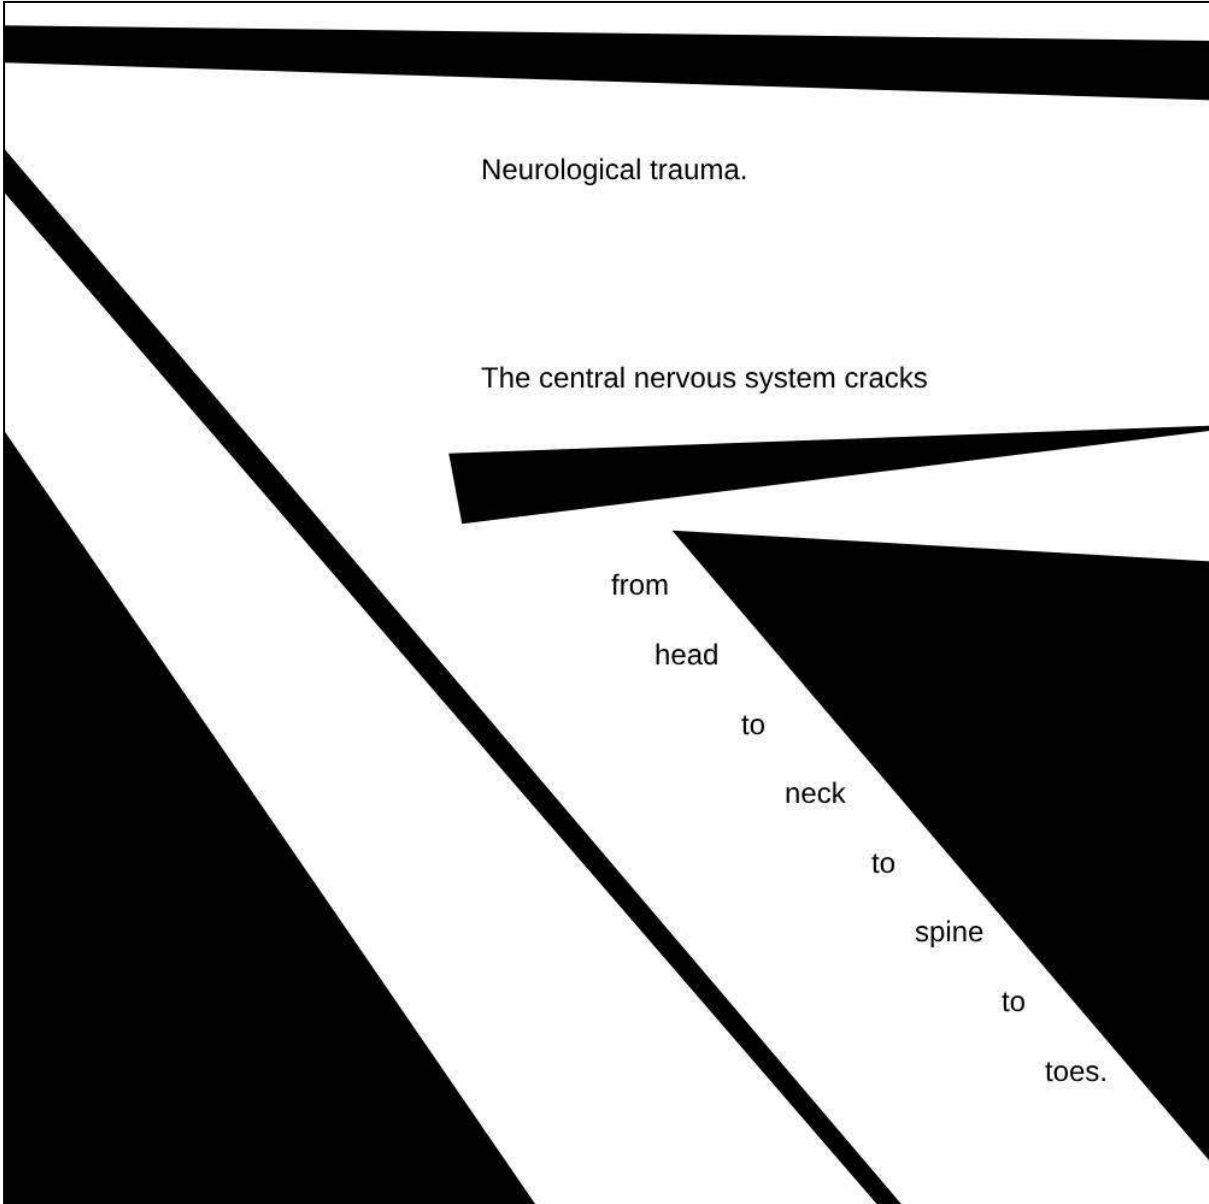

feelings

affiliated with a painful

sharp sound

cutting through

my brain.

An abstract graphic design featuring a white background with several thick black geometric shapes. A prominent diagonal line runs from the top-left towards the bottom-right. A horizontal line is positioned near the top. A jagged, irregular shape is located in the lower-right quadrant. The text is arranged in a descending staircase pattern on the right side of the composition.

Neurological trauma.

The central nervous system cracks

from

head

to

neck

to

spine

to toes.

I am out.

Bye.

Biography: Luca M Damiani is an Artist, Author and University Fellow, focusing his ongoing creative practice and research on neuroscience/health, technology and nature. Luca has a neurological disability and has had various visual art books and academic articles published, as well as being exhibited internationally. He has worked and collaborated with institutions such as BMJ Medical Humanities, BBC, Science Gallery, Computer Arts Society, Disney, Yale University, Jewish Book Council, The Times of Israel, TATE, V&A and more.

www.lucadamiani-art.com